MEMORANDA.

The bark Coral, Capt Sisson, sailed from San Francisco, March 27, 1861, for the Arctic. Procured 700 bbls oil during the season, and then went into winter quarters in Plover Bay, lat 64° 16 N, long 173° 67 W. The winter was considered a mild one, but with abundance of snow. The ship was completely frozen in but the ice broke up several times during her stay; once on the 2d February the ice was clear all around her, but froze her in again in a day or two. Had some heavy gales in the months of December and January, from NE to ESE. The lowest temperature experienced was 20° below zero. Whales were numerous in the month of November, but not to be got at on account of the ice. Some of the whaling fleet arrived the first week in June. Left the Bay about this time, after enduring nine months of a long dark monotonous winter. Had no sickness, with the exception of a few cases of scurvey. Took seven bowheads the season, yielding 1,000 bbls oil and 14,000 lbs bone. Had a good passage of 26 days from the Arctic to this port.

Capt Redfield, of the Arctic trading schooner Olivia, arrived Oct 4th, furnishes reports of the "fleet" up to Sept 4, with this additional to that of the last report, Aug 28 .- [See Polynesian Aug 26-Ship Ocean, Clark, 5 whales.

26-Ship Sarah Warren, 1 do. Sept 4-Ship Barnstable, 4 do, and boiling. The Jenny Ford, Capt McCarty, left Puget Sound Sept 12; had light SE winds for the first ten days; then took the trades, and had them light till within two day's sail of these islands, when they became strong, and lasted into port Oct 5.

The Marilda reports leasant passage of ten days from vorable but light winds. The Kitty Fanning's Island Cartwright wa. ays on her lust passage from here, arthe brigantine Jenny Ford, from Puget Sound, with a cargo of riving Sept 13 row nor heard of any ships while absent this
